

SPREADING THE WORD

The Pigeon River Fund grant for the laptop computer and projector is paying dividends. Not only is the laptop being used for watershed analysis projects and graphics image management, but the two pieces of equipment have facilitated dozens of presentations tailored to specific audiences. In the last few months presentations have been made to State and Regional organizations such as the North Carolina Soil Science Society and Water Resources Research Institute in Raleigh and the Southeastern Chapter of the National Association of Lake Managers at Winston-Salem. Closer to home, presentations have been made to the Pigeon River Fund Board, to nonprofit organizations such as the National Association of Retired Federal Employees and the Waynesville Garden Club, to high school students, property owners, and to the Haywood County Board of Commissioners. The Haywood Soil and Water Conservation District recently used the equipment for classroom training and to make a presentation to the North Carolina Soil and Water Commission.

A consistent conservation message about nonpoint pollution is being carried to hundreds of people throughout Haywood County and western North Carolina. In the process, the recognition and credibility of local conservation efforts are increasing. This bodes well for our ongoing efforts to reduce nonpoint pollution in the Pigeon River Watershed.
